- 1 Marcus was excited about the school science fair. He had a great idea for his project—a garden that grew vegetables. But there was a problem. He was not sure how to start.
- 2 One day, Marcus talked to his friend Lily. Lily loved plants and gardening. Marcus told her his idea. "I really want to do this," Marcus said. Lily smiled. "I can help you!" she said.
- 3 Marcus and Lily worked together every day after school. They built a wooden box. They filled it with soil. They planted seeds for carrots, lettuce, and tomatoes. They watered the plants and wrote down what they saw.
- 4 After six weeks, the plants grew big and healthy. Marcus and Lily brought their beautiful garden to the science fair. The judges loved the project. They gave it a blue ribbon!
- 5 At the fair, the judge asked Marcus, "Tell us about your project." Marcus could have said it was all his idea. But he knew the truth. "Lily and I made this together," he said with a smile. "Lily taught me how to care for plants. I could not have done this without her."
- 6 Lily stood beside Marcus. She looked happy. "Marcus had the idea," Lily said. "And he worked as hard as I did." Both friends shared the blue ribbon. They both felt proud.
