The Cartographer's Graph

- 1 A cartographer makes maps, so the word graph appears inside the work: write or draw. Our class drew a simple map of a road from the river landing to a hill village. Then we made a graph showing how long each part of the journey might take.
- 2 The first section was flat and quick. The second climbed through rocky ground. The third crossed a stream where travelers had to slow down. When we placed the times on the graph, the hard section became easy to see.
- 3 Mrs. Lane asked us to write a paragraph explaining the movement. I used the map, the graph, and one geography word. I also wrote remember at the top of my draft because a traveler needed to remember water, distance, and daylight.
- 4 The focus root helped us connect several tasks. A graph can show information. A paragraph can write an explanation. A cartographer draws a map so others can understand the road before they travel.
